THE CRONIN MURDER

Chicago's Police Actively Following All Likely Clues.

Sullivan, the Ice Dealer, Subjected to a Ouestioning To-Day.

The Queer Storles and Statements of the Horse Thief, Woodruff,

INPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. 1 CHICAGO, May 28.-Considerable excitement was caused this morning when Capt. Villers, of the Lakeview police force, and Lieut. Schuetler, of the East Chicago avenue station, marched into the former's private office with P. O. Sullivan, the Lakeview iceman, between them.

It was rumored that an important arrest in the Cronin murder case had been made. Sullivan is the ice dealer who is said to have made a contract with Dr. Cronin shortly before the latter's disappearance to look after any of his men who might be injured for the consideration of $50 a year.

It has been the theory of some that Sullivan might bave mentioned to his employees the fact of having made this contract, and that one of them was concerned in the disappearance of Dr. Cronin on the night of

May 4.

Sullivan, however, succeeded in squaring himself with the police and said that none of his men knew spything of the contract or could have been guilty. He was then allowed

Woodruff, the man who claims to have hauled to Lakeview the bloody trunk found in the suburb, still wears the same air of mystery he assumed shortly after his arrest.

Last night he claimed that he, if given his liberty, could clear up the mystery of Dr. Cronin's murder.

To-day he was not so confident.

He sad to a reporter for The Evening Wolld:

Ho said to a reporter for The Events World:

"I think I can do some good work on this case, if the police will only let me out of here. If they will let me go along with a good detective I believe I can turn up something important in forty-eight hours."

The police were at first inclined to believe that Woodruff was a crank and a fool, but they now begin to attach importance to what her aws.

Woodruff, when first arrested, said that the man he saw on the fatal night and whom he called Dr. Cronin wore a goatee.
This the doctor's friends laughed at, but on the discovery of the body it was proved on the discovery of the body it was proved that Woodruff was right.

There was a small goatee on the dead man's chin, which had probably escaped the stention of the doctor's triends, having been grown in two or three days.

The conclusion is drawn that if Woodruff had not seen Dr. Cronin before the night of his disappearance he must have had a careful look at him that night, and since the appearance of a dead person is apt to impress one most vividly, it is probable that Woodruff had a good view of the doctor's corise.

to impless one most vividly, it is probe that Woodruff had a good view of the doctor's corpse.

The sewer catch-basin in which the doctor's body was discovered is on the Evanston road, at the corner of Fifty-ninth street, a mile from the spot where the mysterious trunk and its bloody contents were found shortly after Cronin's disappearance.

About the body were bits of cotton which corresponded in quality to that found in the trunk, and this is regarded as evidence that it was the doctor's remains which were taken out of the city in that receptacle.

It is not thought that the murdered man was thrown at once into the sewer, though how any further operations could have been carried on without detection after the trunk affair is another mystery.

The catch-basin which held the body is two blocks from the point where the general searching of basins, under direction of the Lakeview authorities, was ended.

So positive have been the several identifications of the body found that no doubt of its being Dr. Cronin's can be entertained.

Equally positive are the evidences upon the wounded head that the doctor was foully dealt with.

The fact that the Catholic charm, called the

The fact that the Catholic charm, called the Aguus Dei, which the doctor always wore suspended from his neck, was left untouched by the murderers is regarded as a significant

Now that the body is found and so much of the myster surrounding Cronin's disappear-suce is settled, theorizers are at work harder than ever in accounting for the murder. The belief that the crime was the outcome of a conspiracy is general. Whether the conspiracy was that of individuals or of or-ganizations is a one-tron upon which theorists confer.

Certainly, however, there must have been numbers engaged in the scheme, and it must have been carefully planned.

There are many new converts to-day to the idea broached at the time of the reported presence of Dr. Cronin in Toronto, and of the publication of alleged interviews with him there, that these reports were gotten up as side issues to detract attention from what might transpire here, and to assist in the division of theories and the confusion of clues.

The Mail at Central Park presented a scene of unusual life and activity this morning. It was a great day for the "sparrows," as the Park policemen are known among their Italy. blue-coated brethren of the municipal force, for it was the occasion of their annual dress parade. The "sparrows" were out in full force, and all wore their new gray uniforms in honor of the day. There were lots of people out to see and applaud them, and the reviewing stand which had been erected near the music stand in the upper end of the Mall was crowded with guests. Usually the leafy elms of the Park afford a grateful shade to the paraders, but this morning shade wasn't any object. Sunlight would have been welcome, for cold blasts swept down from the north and sent shivers creeping up and down the backs of the spectators who had forgotten their wraps and

The men were under the command of Capt. Thomas Beaty, who takes great pride in his force, and who, as usual, was fully equal to the occasion.

There were four companies, which were commanded by Sergts. Lewis Flack, John W. England, James B. Ferris, John B. Mulhol-land, Michael C. Meany and Hugh Fitzpat-land. Michael C. Meany and Hugh Fitzpatrick.

Commissioners Towle, Borden and Hutchins were also on hand with a host of friends at the reviewing stand, and among the other guests were a number of city officials representing many of the Departments, all of whom had received special invitations from the Park Board.

Mayor Grant was expected to review the force, but he did not put in an appearance.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Cappa's military band, which was stationed at the head of the column. There was a display of Park flags and guidons, which were carried by the veterans of the force, and after passing in line in front of the reviewing stand, the procession marched up and down the Mall and went through a variety of evolutions with a steadiness that was highly creditable to their discipline and training.

INT CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION. LONDON, May 23. - The visit of King Humbert to Berlin has caused much ill-feeling in France and embittered her relations with

The failure of the French Embassy at Berlin to decorate yesterday and the absence of the French Ambassador from the state banquet are significant illustrations of the jealousy, not to say hostility, with which the festivities at Berlin are regarded.

A letter from a Roman correspondent in a position to know something of the foreign policy of the Italian Government, makes the following explanation and defense of Italy's attitude towards Germany:

The visit of the King to Berlin in return for the visit made him by the Emperor William last year strrs up public opinion in France, owing to the misrepresentations and exaggerations of the French press, which refuses to present it in its true light as an act in conformity with the rules of royal eliquette.

of royal etiquette.
Sig. Crispi, who accompanies His Majesty, is not a Frenchman. He is an Italian who has devoted his whole life to securing the independence of his country and the freedom of her people.

Being now at the head of the Government, he must follow the policy affording the best guarantees for the future of Italian unity, and act for the sake of Italian interests exclusively.

He can only do so by strengthening the alliance with the central European powers, by which he hopes to insure a united Italy, with Rome for its capital, and makes the fall of the temporal power of the Pope a still more settled question.

temporal power of the Pope a still more settled question.

Thus Sig. Crispi renders a greater service to civilization than he would by committing his country to supporting the claims of France, the result of which might set all Europe on fire and seopardize all that Italy has accomplished through so many sacrifices and struggles.

Frenchmen are unwilling to admit that Italian unity depends on the intimate and indissoluble union existing between the Italian nation and the dynasty of Savoy; and that between that royal house and other European thrones there is a link of monarchical responsibility binding cach to each and all together.

Italy and France, should they enter into an alliance, would bring down upon themselves not only Germany but all other monarchical powers, and then the Pope would do the rest.

Frenchmen are therefore unjust when they charge Sig. Crispi with ill-will towards them.

As a generous minded man and as an Italian, he is not unmindful of what is due to France, but as a statesman responsible for his country's welfare he must do his duty.

Another man under Sig. Crispi is coming to the front and promises to play a part in Italian politics.

A democrat by origin, he has remained a democrat. He has made himself thoroughly acquainted with all the details of government. He is a strong and steady-minded man, accomplished, honest and courageous.

Italy looks upon him as one of her dearest hopes, and by associating this rising man with him in the Government, Sig. Crispi has pointed out his political path.

The inquest promises to be one of the most sensational ever held by a Coroner in this city. The court-room was packed long before the nour fixed, and the Coroner had to abandon the idea of holding the inquest in the room ordinarily used.

It will be remembered that Bishop, after an exhibition of his wonderful mind-reading powers at the Lambs' Club one night, sudcenty went into a cataleptic trance. Physicians were called in, and after trying for hours to arouse him, finally pronounced him dead.

Dr. John A. frwin was the physician in charge of the case, and he called in a Dr. Lee.

When the Coroner rapped for order the room was jammed with prominent friends of Bishop, who are deeply interested in the case. Among them were Clay Greene, dramatist; W. C. Lawyer Thomas A. Atchison represented Mrs. Eleanor H. Bishop.

When every one was on the tiptos of expectancy it was found that only six juffors had shown up, and Coroner Levy had to order a recess for over an hour in order that the box might be filled.

Actor Louis Aldrich, who was reported as saving that he had seen a paper taken from Bishop's person after death, and that it was torn up, was called to testify.

Coroner Levy has a letter from Mrs. Eleanor F. Bishop suggesting that the paper mry have been the written request of her son that an autopsy should not be held on his body.

The old Police Board suspended Chief Murphy last night for insubordination and elected Nathan.

The new Police Board last night made several promotions in the force.

Chief Murphy will pay no attention to the old Board, but will continue to be Chief of Police under the new Board.

Chief Nathan was reading The World when a reporter called on him at his new office.

'I have issued no order yet, 'said he, 'and have laid out no programme. I shall not do anything hastily or rashly, but will act deliberately and calmly. In fact, I shall probably do little until there is a decision by the courts.

Mr. Nathan was Chief of Police of Jersey City from 1877 to 1880, when he was removed and Chief Murphy elected. He has also held the office of Water Commissioner in Jersey City and in Bergen before the consolidation.

President Davis, of the old Board, said this morning that at the meeting Monday a clerk will be appointed.

The Prisoner Arraigned Before Re-

Until Tuesday. "The Evening World" is pleased to observe this morning that the effort to "rail-road" Templeman has subsided. His bearing has been deferred to Tuesday next.

Tis well .- ED. EVENING WORLD. Frank Templeman, the ex-private detective who is now under indictment for an alleged attempt to put up a sort of blackmailing scheme on Inspector Byrnes and District-Attorney Fellows, by charging them before the Commissioners of Accounts with being in a "divvy" with Private Detective J. E. Wilkinson, who has a bill of $5,047 against the city, was brought before Recorder Smyth again this morning in General Sessions. Lawyer Warner Foster, his counsel, was with him. When Templeman was brought in he appeared as cool and self-possessed as yesterday, but he glanced around the court room and at his counsel in a manner that seemed to indicate that he was very mad at somebody.

Mr. Foster said that he was willing to have the plea of not guilty stand until he had examined the indictments, with the understanding that he might demur to them after further ramination.

Meanwhile he would be satisfied if the trial

Meanwhile he would be satisfied if the trial was fixed for next Tuesday.

'That is reasonable, is it not, Mr. Fellows?" asked the Recorder.

'Perfectly." responded the District Attorney, who had shown yesterday so strong a disposition to railroad the prisoner without giving him a chance even to get counsel.

It was finally agreed that the prosecution should base its case upon the indictment charging attempted grand lareeny, and Lawyer Foster should have till Monday to make his election on the question of a demurrer.

make his election on the question of a demurrer.
Several new facts have developed in the case which have led those who were most interested in it yesterday to take a somewhat modified view of the situation this morning.

Inspector Byrnes does not care to any much in regard to the matter, and declares that he is out of the race, except that he is willing to appear as a witness when it comes to trial. He says it is all in the hands of District-Attorney Fellows.

He was at first at a loss to understand why a man in Templeman's position should make a man in Templeman's position abould make such charges, knowing them to be utterly without foundation, unless he had been backed up in some way by those who were, for some reason, unfriendly towards him and or some reason, unificantly towards him and wished to injure him.

It is said now that the discovery has been made that Templeman has been a very hard drinker for years, and that his excessive use of liquor has deranged his mind. In fact, it is intimated that he is insane, although he appears to be of sound mind on ordinary occasions.

Foster admit that he intends to offer the plea of meanity.

"I have yet had no opportunity of examining my client," he said, "and all I know about him is that he was sometimes employed by me to serve papers and subponas. I always found him to be perfectly straight.

"He has friends in the South and comes of a good family. I shall know more about him to-morrow."

Mr. Foster also intimated that he proposed to show that Templeman was entirely innocent of the charges against him, meaning that he had not tried to get money for the alleged information which he gave to the Commissioners of Accounts, which adds a new phase to the story.

Commissioner Holahan would not say anything more than repeat the story which me had already given of the negotiations of the Board with Templeman, and which he says is all there is in the story.

"I was satisfied that Templeman was lying when he first came here, and all I did was to leav the tran in which he was caucht."

"I was satisfied that Templeman was lying when he first came here, and all I did was to lay the trap in which he was caught."

He would say nothing in regard to charges which had been made that the matter had been worked up as a political conspiracy, and seemed perfectly contened to let the affair take its course in the courts.

Very little is known of Templeman's antecedents, and even those in whose employ he has been are ignorant of his past career. He has been employed as a private detective by several agencies besides Wikinson's, as well as in special cases by lawyers and others, and as far as is known nothing has before been found wrong with him.

THEY WERE STRONG FOR IRELAND. Two Editorials, the Authorship of Which Mr. O'Brien Admitted.

[SPECIAL CARLE TO THE EVENING WORLD.] LONDON, May 23,-Mr. Gladstone attended the session of the Parnell Commission to-day. and listened to the cross-examination of Editor William O'Brien.
Mr. O'Brien declared that his paper, United Ireland, worked according to constitutional methods, and advocated nothing but peaceful means to attain the ends sought by the Irish Parliamentary carty.

He acknowledged himself, however, the author of an editorial which declared Queen Victoria to be only known in Ireland for her scarcely disguised hatred of that country and for her inordinate salary.

He also admitted having written an article in which it was stated that Earl Stencer would be the last strong Englishman who would attempt to rule Ireland by barbarism, paid perjury, butchery and the use of the sacred rope. Ireland, worked according to constitutional

MUTTERINGS AT THE MAYOR.

THEY COME FROM DISTRICTS WHICH DID NOT GET THE BIG PLUMS.

Loungers at the City Hall noticed a failure in the recurrence of the usual phenomena which mark the day following the making of appointments by the Mayor. Mayor Grant put in appearance.

This he has failed to do on former occasions, and his coming to-day excited comment to the effect that, now that the appointments are all made, the city's chief execu tive can come to his office without a fear that he will be overwhelmed with the importu-nities of an army of office-seekers and their nities of an army of the new friends.

Certain it was that the usual anxious-looking crowd did not fill the corridors of the hall and the antercome of the Mayor's office this ing crowd did not fill the corridors of the hall and the anterooms of the Mayor's office this morning.

The change was a marked one and Chief Clerk Crain heaved a sigh of relief as he remarked. "Well, it looks now as though the making of those appointments will materially lighten my labors."

While it is generally conceded by Tammany Hall men that Mayor Grant's last lot of appointments are good, there are still heard some low mutterings of discontent.

These come from the districts which failed to share in the patronage distributed by the Mayor, and these districts number fully one-half of the cty.

It is remarked by the malcontents that Mayor Grant does not forget and forgive, and they point to the fact that the districts whose leaders wanted to run Judge Dugro as the Tammany candidate for Mayor last Autumn are left out in the cold.

A brave from one of these districts said this morning: "The Mayor evidently don't know the name of anybody in our district. We haven't received even a petit larceny place."

Suicide of a Well-Known Produce Dealer in the New Market.

He Shut Himself in His Stand and Took Cyanide of Potassium.

A Note for $3,000 Was Coming Due and He Was Embarrassed,

William G. Smith, a well-know produce dealer, who was awarded stands 50 and 52 in the new West Washington Market, was found dead in the loft of one of hir stalls at 5.30 this morning. Smith, who was about fifty years of age and tradesmen in the old market, was missed yesterday afternoon when his wife, who is an invalid, residing at 9 Hoboken street, Hoboken, began to worry about his absence, When morning came she despatched Henry Dites, a friend of the family, to see what had become of her husband. Dites went to the stall and found Smith's lifeless body lying face downward on the floor of the loft. In his hand he held a bottle of cyanide of potassium, half emptied. It is supposed that early yesterday morning he shut himself in the loft and took the poison, and that death was almost instantane-us. Smith was a man rated in the trade as worth from $50,000 to $75,000.

The cause of his suicide is said to be partly domestic troubles and partly business

The cause of his suicide is said to be partly domestic troubles and partly business anxiety.

On his body were found letters which showed that he had indorsed a note for $3,005 for the Brooklyn Stock Farm of Stanton, Neb. His clerk says he acted as if he feared that he would have to make this note good. His son William, who is on this same farm, had also written that he must have $880 with which to pay his board and other debts.

The old man worried a good deal about his son, and no doubt this had much to do with his death.

Mr. Smith's business in the new market fell far short of that done by him in his old quarters, and this, it is thought, so preyed upon his mind that, with his other troubles, he was led to commit the fatal deed.

Undertaker Benedict took charge of the body this morning at 8.30 and it will be taken over the river for burial.

Mrs. Smith reached the market soon after the body was found and she was beside herself with grief and distraction.

William Goetz, the clerk, examined the books, and said that everything was in proper condition.

blazed up, and in spite of desperate efforts the freight-house was soon in flames.

The employees had to run for their lives and the fire soon spread to the passenger depot, coalbins, freight buildings and, in fact, everything that would burn on the quarter-mile of wharf.

Twenty-seven loaded freight cars were burned, with their contents.

The passenger steamer Cape Charles was moored at the wharf, and narrowly escaped destruction, but ther hawsers were cut and she floated off with the tide.

Dozens of other vessels were saved in the same manner.

There are no facilities for extinguishing firss at the point, and a special train was run to Norwalk and a fire engine and two hose companies were boaded on it at 5 o'clock; but the flames were boaded on it at 5 o'clock; but the flames were beyond control and everything except the new floating dock, which had never been used, was burned to the water's edge.

The property was owned by the Housatonic Railroad and the New England Terminal Company, and the loss is estimated at about $300,000.

This accident, following closely on the Housatonic defeat in the Legislature at Hartford, is a heavy blow to the Company.
